Denktash Says He Might Form A Cypriot State

By Henry Giniger

NICOSIA, Aug. 21 (NYT).-Rauf Denktash, leader of the Turkish Cypriot community, warned the Greeks today that he was prepared to form a provisional, independent Turkish state on Cyprus if they continued to refuse to negotiate a peace settlement. Mr. Denktash also warned of further Turkish military intervention if the Greeks harassed Turkish communities in parts of Cyprus still under Greek control after the victorious Turkish offensive last week. Mr. Denktash, nominally Vice-President of Cyprus in a government whose existence he questions. looked confident and self-assured as he talked to newsmen in his office in the Turkish sector of Nicosia. He arrived here yesterday from Ankara, where he had remained during the Turkish military action. Meanwhile, a UN source said

Mr. Denktash and Cypriot President Glatkos Clerides would meet under UN auspices in the next two days to discuss refugee and water supply problems.

Such a meeting could provide the basis for new peace talks, observers pointed out.

Yesterday Turkish authorities showed newsmen a mass grave in the eastern Turkish Cypriot village of Atlilar (or Aloa) where 57 Turkish bodies are said to be buried, although only seven were seen. The Turks charged that the Turkish villagers had been killed by Greek Cypriots just before fleeing the advancing Turkish army.

Charges Mistreatment

Mr. Denktash, who asserted that this was not the only Greek atrocity, said he wanted to impress on the Greeks that this kind of conduct "can only lead to further action by the Turkish forces to save the Turkish population." He estimated that 60,000 Turks were in the Greek part of the island. Some of them, no-tably in the Paphos area in the southwest, continued to be mistreated, he charged.

Mr. Denktash said that the Turkish Cypriot administration that has existed here since 1963 as a parallel one to the Greek extended to the enlarged Turkish-controlled part of Cyprus. This is estimated to comprise 40 per cent of the island, but Mr. Denktash said the military line established by the army would be negotiable in a final settle-

He made it clear that the Greeks had little choice but to negotiate. He said his community and Turkey still wanted a binational, federated republic but was prepared to form now "a pro-visional Turkish state" pending such an agreement.

"I see a tendency by the Greeks to delay peace talks in an effort to stir world opinion against us." he said. "If this situation is prolonged what are we to do?" he asked. "I have to go out of Cyprus. Will I have to ask Mr. Clerides for a passport? Is there a Greek Cypriot government? We may have to set up our own central bank and issue our own passports," he said.

Denies Annexation Aim He denied that Turkey sought to annex Turkish Cyprus, "This is not what Turkey wants," he declared

Ecevit Ready To Negotiate Cyprus Line

By Juan de Onis

ANKARA Aug 21 (NYT).— Highly placed Turkish sources denied today that any moves are being made on Cyprus toward annexation of territory in a move that would preclude a negotiatfuture of the island as an independent state.

Premier Bulent Ecevit told reporters that while Turkey claims that one-third of the island's territory should be retained for an autonomous Turkish Cypriot zone, the demarcation line for this zone was open to negotiation "within res bounds."

Mr. Ecevit reasserted that Turkey wants a resumption of negotia-tions with Greece at the Geneva. peace conference about Cyprus, and he offered again to meet at the earliest opportunity with Pre-mier Constantine Caramanlis of British diplomatic sources said that the Turkish and Greek governments were being sounded out on ways of resuming the Cyprus talks, and they said that Greek resistance to going back to the conference table was holding up any progress.

Bazs Are Packed

"Our bags are packed to return to Geneva at any time that is suitable to Greeks," said Hayuk Uhlman, a Turkish foreign policy adviser who participated in the talks at Geneva before their breakdown a week ago, a collapse that was followed immediately by a renewal of the Turks' military offensive on Cyprus.

Mr. Uhlman said that the Turk. ish government was prepared to offer all necessary financial and technical assistance to a Turkish Cypriot administration headed by Rauf Denktash to meet the needs of the people Hving within the sector occupied by Turk military forces. But he said that this did not imply a desire by Turkey to parti-tion the island. "Turkey wants an independent Cyprus with autonomous Turkish and Greek administrations and not a Turkish province in Cyprus," he said. Turkey's announced position reflected concern over international attitudes which include Soviet opposition to change in the neutral status that Cyprus has maintained since it won independence from Britain in 1960. The immediate concern of Tur-

The former governor said that any comments about his own place in the 1976 race were "premature." but associates said both before and after his choice by Mr. Ford that Mr. Rockefeller would willingly serve as vicepresident "as long as the President wants."

Wide Open in 1980

Given their ages-Mr. Ford is 61 and Mr. Rockfeller 66-1976 would be the last chance for both members of a Ford-Rockefeller ticket. The fact that the 1980 nominations would then be wide open was cited by some conservatives today as the main reason for their acceptance of the President's choice.

List of Advantages Robert Teeter of Detroit, a

pollster who handled opinion survevs for the 1972 Nixon campaign and many other Republican candidates, listed these advantages: "it gives the party a very well known, popular Republican, besides the President, for the next two campuigns. It helps Mr. Ford remain strong in his own public posture, because he has chosen a vice-president that many people believe is the best potential President. It doesn't look like the quick, easy political choice. Rockefeller is not a flaming liberal," Mr. Teeter said, but his choice directs the party right down the middle again, in an almost Eisenhower-like way."

How much practical difference the Rockefeller choice will make in specific 1974 races is questionable, politicians in both parties

Robert Healy, a member of the staff of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, said that Mr. Rockefeller would have "minimal effect' on the 1974 races. If King Can Return

Constantine Ready to Accept Minor Role in Greek Affairs

By Alvin Shuster

LONDON, Aug. 21 (NYT).--King Constantine, virtually the only Greek unable to return home since the fall of the Athens junta, is prepared to accept severe restrictions on the authority of the monarch to improve his chances of returning to Greece. The 24-year-old King, who has been living in exile in Italy and England since his attempt in December, 1967, to overthrow the colonels in power, supports a role for himself similar to that of the ain, who serve essentially as ceremonial heads of state. The King, now living near London, has told friends that he would be happy to have nothing to do with politics and leave the affairs of state to the new civilian monarchs in Scandinavia or Brit-leadership, which he believes is off to a "brilliant" start. The future of the 140-year-old monarchy in Greece remains in doubt nearly a month after Constantine Caramanlis returned from his self-imposed exile in Paris to form a government at the request of military commanders. Mr. Caramaniis, who kent in constant touch with King Constantine before he returned to Athens. has said that the issue would be decided by the Greek people in a referendum or a constituent as-

Decision Expected

Accordingly, King Constantine and his family must remain in exile at least until that decision, expected sometime this year. The outcome could depend in part on the future role of the monarchy often accused in the past of exerting too much influence the nation's politics and the military.

The King, who now lives with his wife and three children in Cobham, Surrey, and often goes to London to meet visitors at Claridge's Hotel, is yearning to go home. If the Greeks decided to return him to the palace, he sees his role as that of a unifying force, who would remain sloof from political involvement and who would attempt to foster goodwill with foreign countries. He realizes that he has a struggle ahead in returning to the throne, noting that antimonarchy voices were already being heard in Greece. With Cyprus still a burning issue, he recognizes that his future has not been uppermost in the minds of most Greeks, but he remains

Some officials in Athens have suggested that Greeks may reject the king and vote for a republic. But they also suggested that the prospect of limiting the monarchy's duties to the monial would probably enhance the chances for acceptance of his return.

Whatever the extent of his popularity now. King Constantine had been regarded by many Greeks during the more than seven years of military rule as a symbol of the political opposition, a man who at least tried to force the junta in 1967 to yield power and who was later deprived of his throne, his property and his state income. During the years of repression, Greeks viewed him as what some called "a safe landing," the man who could return one day and lead the country back to democracy.

That was the view, for example, of Mr. Caramanlis in April. 1973, when he called on the military rulers to resign, bring back the King and turn power over to an "experienced and strong government" to direct the return to democracy.

When the armed forces moved last month against the officers led by Brig. Gen. Dimitrios Ioannidis, they bypassed the King and asked Mr. Caramanlis to lead the country. And, with the Cyprus crisis and other problems pressing on Athens, Mr. Caramanlis decided on his return to avoid the question of the monarchy because, as one of his sides put it, "he came to unite the nation and the question of the King might divide

Moreover, when the Caramanlis government reinstated the 1953 constitution that had been in force before the coup by the colonels in April, 1967, it temporarily suspended the provisions relating to the monarchy, leaving all powers of the head of state in the president.

He predicted that most of the 60,000 Turks now in the south would want to move north under Turkish protection. "Forcing people to stay where they do not want to stay is not compatible with peace," he said "They should have a right to move."

The size of the family's interest is best reflected in the holdings of David Rockefeller, who, as chairman is required to report his ownership each year. The latest proxy statement for Chase Manhattan showed that David Rockefeller owned 337,500 shares of common stock from which he receives annual dividends of $742,500.

In 1959, when Nelson took office as governor, a report said that his weekly income from dividends exceeded his annual salary from the state. At the time, the governor received $50,000 annual ly. The report put his dividend income at $80,000 weekly, or more than $4 million a year. In 1964, his annual income was estimated at about $5 million.

Officials at Erron Corp. also refused to discuss Mr. Rockefel-ler's holdings, which have been rumored to be substantial ... A spokesman would only say that "no individual or institution" owns more than 3 per cent of the company's shares. There are 223 million common shares outstanding. A 1958 book on the family said John D. Rockefeller sr. sold all his holdings in Standard Oil after it was ordered split up under anti-trust legislation in 1911, but the family still receives a large portion of its income from petroleum.

Rockefeller family land holdings range from Maine to Venezuels. In Maine, Nelson and David jointly own a large amount of land in Seal Harbor, where both have summer homes.

In Westchester County, north of New York, the four brothers own a 4,180-acre estate in Pocantico Hills, which includes several swimming pools, a huge "play-house" with tennis courts, squash courts and other facilities, and a nine-hole golf course, as well as acres of woodland.

In Venezuela, a longtime love, Mr. Rockefeller owns an 18,000-acre cattle ranch and farm. He also has partial interests in other land holdings, which total about 112,000 acres. Mr. Rockefeller owns a 32-mom spartment on Fifth Avenue here and a mansion in Washington.

Like his brothers, Mr. Rockefeller is an avid art collector. He owns more than 1,500 works of art and has given away many to-tune began with a $100 m trust fund set up by his father. The money has been a big factor in Mr. Rockefeller's political-career here, where he has often been described as the Republicans' chief financial strength. A study of the Citizens Research Founda-tion in 1972 showed that in 1970 he and his family spent $4.5 mlllion on his gubernatorial campaign. In his four campaigns for governor, the same group found, he spent $27 million, and more than half that amount came from his family. In the 1970 cam-paign, Mr. Rockefeller's stepmother alone gave him $3.8 milhon—and presumably paid a gift tax of about $868,000.

The Rockefellers are also known for the money they give away. The Rockefeller Foundation. founded by John D. Rockefeller jr., and the Rockefeller Brothers jr., and the Rockerson.
Fund, as well as gifts made by family members dating back to John D. Rockefeller sr., bave totaled over $1 billion.

Stories about Mr. Rockefeller's wealth abound. In 1955, he was special assistant to President Dwight Eisenhower at a salary of $15,000 a year. According to newspaper reports, he never picked up his checks.

The UN is built on land which Nelson persuaded his father to buy for $8.5 million and donate to the world organization.

WASRINGTON Aug. 21 (AP) -Congress yesterday completed action on legislation establishing a wage and price monitoring agency, thus complying with President Ford's first specific legislative request.

A 369-27 House vote sent the bill to the White House. The Senate and House earlier had passed slightly differing versions and some jockeying was required to get a bill to Mr. Ford before Congress's Labor Day-period recess, which begins today for the Senate, tomorrow for the House,

The bill does not give the agency the authority of imposing wage and price controls. In its efforts to curb inflation, the agency will have to rely on in-Vestigation and disclosure of increases that it deems unjustified or exorbitant

Before final passage of the bill. Mr. Ford issued a statement saying that he would not ask for any legislation authorizing mandatory wage-price controls. He said that recent experience made it clear that compulsory controls would be most undestrable. "I will do my best to see that the new price and wage monitoring agency works effectively to combat inflation," he said. In another anti-inflation move, the House yesterday voted, 257 to 155, to cut a $20-billion mass transit bill to the $11 billion requested by the new President and then approved the measure, 324 The bill would authorize the first federal operating subsidies mass transit systems, as well stamp on economic policy. In terms of style he has already done that by his public recognition of the gravity of the economic problems facing the country and by his open and broad search for the best answers.

In both respects Mr. Ford's approach contrasts sharply with the Panglossian optimism and moralistic hostility of his predecessor toward economic ideas other than those that happened at any given moment to enjoy his favor. Such hostility was even directed at able insiders, such as chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board. when their prescriptions did not correspond to the immediate party line or ideology.

Welcome as is this change of style by Mr. Ford, it obviously does not provide the substance of a new program for dealing with the interlocked set of problems afflicting the nation—the worst inflation in the country's peacetime history, the highest interest rates in a century, the consequent severe slump in housing, sinking and utterly demoralized securities markets, a stagnant economy with large-scale unemployment in prospect, and a worsening international trade and payments position. All these problems have been inten-

President Ford is seeking to put his own sifted by the monopolistic squeeze the international oil-exporting cartel has applied to fuel prices and by food shortages threatened by drought in the farm belt.

> Clearly no "gimmick" will solve all these problems. But the fundamental decision Mr. Ford faces is whether to rely essentially on a prolonged siege of tight money and budget cutting to cure inflation (the policy Mr. Ford's Nixonian holdovers call "the old-time religion") or whether to accept the contrary view that—even though the inflation was generated by excessively rapid growth of the money supply and careless fiscal policiesthe present problem is not one of demandpull but of stagnation and cost-push inflation, resulting from wage pressures and other forces at home and abroad. The drain of resources to the oil-producing countries is a drag on real economic activity, which tight money can aggravate but not cure.

The eagerness with which Congress awaits a fully developed program for meeting all these ills is reflected in the quick approval the Senate and House gave yesterday to slightly different versions of Mr. Ford's proposal for a revived Cost of Llying Council-admittedly a minor building block in what must be a much more substantial total effort.

...Or Still Mr. Nixon's?

A correct diagnosis of the economic situstion facing the United States and other countries is crucial to a correct solution. Admittedly, an all-out policy of monetary and fiscal tightness could eventually stop the inflation—but at the cost of putting the economy into a steep recession or depression.

The political resistance to such an approach even if it made economic sense-would be too great to make it a credible option. For that reason, it cannot be counted on to check inflationary expectations or inflationary behavior, any more than the same approach did under somewhat easier circumstances in 1969-71.

H. Walter

(ente

With the economy suffering from "stagflation," what is needed is not the "old-time religion" but a combination of elements, specifically, a monetary and fiscal policy that will avoid excess stimulus while permitting economic growth; an incomes policy tough enough and fair enough to arrest the wage-price-wage spiral; a policy on taxes and social expenditures that will be equitable and therefore serve the purpose of furthering wage restraint, and structural reforms aimed at breaking the "ratchets"-whether governmental or private, domestic or international-that keep prices moving ever upward, never downward.

If Mr. Ford is willing to take this sort of broad-gauged view of the economic problem, he can indeed put his stamp on economic policy and find much to do of lasting value to the nation. If, instead, he accepts the diagnosis that the American economic problem is simply one of excess demand that can be cured exclusively through tight money and budget cutting, he will be back to continuing the final phase of Mr. Nixon's ideologically rigid policy, whatever improvement Mr. Ford may bring in style and manner.

really matters as Arabs and Israells a new phase of Middle East peacemaking or warmaking. The moment one side or the other becomes convinced that its adversary has abandoned the path of political compromise, in favor of giving the military option another try, will be the moment of danger for all the diplomatic progress piled up since last October. On this premise it is less important which specific new diplomatic goal is pursued than it is simply to keep the wheels of diplomacy moving, to keep accumulating evidence of goodwill and peaceful intent.

In Washington last week King Hussein was understandably eager to push the prospect of a Jordan-Israel disengagement to the top of the diplomats' agenda, Unlike the accords which Egypt and Syria have already reached with Israel, a pact with Jordan would focus on people more than territory, and especially on the future status of the displaced Arab Palestinians, King Hussein seems to be pleading for concessions to the Palestinians' na-

Mozambique Problems

As was obvious all along, Frelimo will need help and allies if it is to administer such a large and complex country as Mozambique successfully. Guerrilla warfare is not the perfect preparation for this task. It is true that in Guinea-Bissau, whose independence has now been recognized by the EEC and which will soon be seated at the United Nations, the nationalist party, PAIGC, intends to carry into independence the rural organization which it built up while fighting the Portuguese... But Guinea is a swampy backwater, Mozambique is a complex country in a key strategic position... The Frelimo leaders will find themselves making unexpected adjustments to their bush warfare ideology. If they allow the Portuguese settlers to be driven out, or cut relations with South Africa, they will soon be in a Congo situation without the Congo's underlying riches and powers of recovery... A close Frelimo-Portuguese partnership will be necessary to launch the new state successfully. It looks as if the finishing touches to this compact have yet to be made.

Ford's Choice

On his twelfth day of office Gerald Ford continued to gather credit with his most important decision so far: the nomination of Nelson Rockefeller as Vice-President. Both in his unhurried approach to the selectionafter wide consultations with party leaders and congressmen-and in his final verdict, the President has shown sound judgment. Nelson Rockefeller is unlikely ever to become President of the United States, but in a country in which five vice-presidents this century have assumed office through the death-or in the last case, the resignationof a president, nobody can be sure. If public confidence (both outside and inside the U.S.) in the White House was to be restored, it was essential that the most qualified man in his party was selected for the post. President Ford has selected such a man.

Our foreign trade balance has

WASHINGTON,—Our country is now struggling with a very serious problem of inflation. In the past twelve months, the consumer price level has risen by Il per cent: wholesale prices have risen eyen faster. When prices rise with such speed, inflation comes to dominate nearly every aspect of economic life.

The inflation that we have been experiencing has already caused injury to millions of people and its continuance threatens further and more serious damage to the national economy.

As a result of the inflation, consumer purchasing power is being eroded. During the past year, the take-home pay of the typical worker declined nearly 5 per cent in real terms.

As a result of the inflation, the real value of the savings deposits. pensions and life insurance poliles of the American public has diminished.

As a result of the inflation, financial markets are experiencing strains and stresses. Interest rates have moved skyward. Some financial and industrial firms have found it more difficult to roll over their commercial paper or to raise needed funds through other channels. Savings flows to thrift institutions have diminished, and stock prices have plummeted.

As a result of the inflation. profits reported by corporations have risen sharply; but much of the reported profit is illusory because it fails to take into account the need to replace inventories. plant, and equipment at appre-ciably higher prices.

In short, as a result of the inflation, much of the planning that business firms and households customarily do has been upset and become confused. The state of confidence has deteriorated and the driving force of economic expansion has been blunted.

Not Surprising

It should not be surprising, therefore, that the physical performance of the economy has remained sluggish in recent months, despite the lifting of the oil embargo that depressed the economy last winter.

Recent economic movements do not have, however, the characteristics of a cumulative decline in business activity. In a typical business recession, all—or nearly all—comprehensive indicators of economic activity move downward simultanecusly. That is not the case presently.

For example, the demand for labor has remained strong. Employment has continued to rise, and the unemployment rate appears to be at about the same level as it was in January,

In the industrial sector, production has recovered somewhat over recent months, factory shipments have continued their upward course, and new orders received by manufacturers of capital goods have risen further. Unfilled or-ders on the books of business firms, especially in the capital goods industries, are enormous and are still advancing, as shortages of critical materials and parts continue to hold back production schedules.

In addition to the business capital sector, our export markets are a source of continuing strength to the economy. Also, some businesses are adding significantly to their inventories in order to replenish depleted stocks and bring them into better balance with

We should act decisively to bring inflation under control before these remaining sources of strength are undermined. interest rates continue to sour. if tinues to be in deficit. Farm prices, which had a downward trend during the last ten months, have again staged a spirited recovery in the last few weeks.

Most serious of all, the rise of wage rates has accelerated sharply this year, while industrial productivity has been stagnating. Hourly earnings in the private nonfarm economy rose at an average annual rate of 10 per cent during the second quarter, and labor costs per unit of output rose faster still.

Progress can still be made this year in slowing the rate of advance in our price level, and it is urgent that we do so.

What's Ahead

For a time, we should be preeconomic growth and a higher of us would like. A period of slow growth is needed to permit an unwinding of the inflationary processes that have been built into our economy through years

There are, of course, risks that a period of slow economic expan-sion will lead to a gradual weakening of demand for goods and services to a deterioration in the economic outlook, and to cumulative recessionary tendencies. Public policy cannot ignore this pos-sibility. But the principal danger our country faces today is from the corresive effects of inflation. Monetary policy must play a key role in this endeavor, and we in the Federal Reserve recognize that fact. Our actions this year have signaled a firm resolve to stick to a course of monetary restraint until the forces of inflation are under good control. We are determined to reduce over time the rate of monetary and credit expansion to a pace consistent with a stable price level. . However, monetary policy should not be relied upon exclusively in the fight against inflation. Fiscal restraint is also urgently needed. Strenuous efforts should be made to pare federal budget expenditures in fiscal 1975. The Congress should resist any temptation to stimulate economic activity by a general tax cut or a new public works program.

There may well be justification for governmental assistance to housing or other activities that are especially hard hit by a policy of monetary restraint. An expanded public-service employment program may also be needed if unemployment rises further.

There are other actions that would be of help in speeding the return to general price stability. Fresh efforts should be made to bring our nation's business and labor leaders together to discuss their common interest in checking the wage-price spiral. A degree of governmental intervention in wage and price developments in pace-setting industries might also be helpful.

The Federal Reserve's Board of Governors would also urge the Congress to re-establish the Cost of Living Council and to empower it, as the need arises, to appoint ad hoc review boards that could delay wage and price increases in key industries, hold hearings, make recommendations, monitor results, issue reports, and thus bring the force of public opinion to bear on wage and price changes that appear to involve an abuse of economic power.

In U.S. and Europe

Time of Adjustment

By James Reston

Rockefeller have always been symbols of America here and elsewhere in the world, but now they are seen in a new political context, and a critical period of adjustment is opening up both in Europe and America. With the nomination of Nelson

Rockefeller as Vice-President in the United States, the changing of the political guard is all but complete in the free world. Now the new governments in Washington, London, Paris, Bonn and Tokyo will have to decide whether to tackle the urgent questions of inflation, energy, food and military security together, or whether to try to deal with them seps-

This question of finding common policies, or at least svoid-ing conflicting policies, is still a delicate subject here and elsewhere in Europe, but the changing of the political guard on both sides of the Atlantic has produced a much better atmosph existed only a few short months

Fortunate Accident It was an extraordinary and fortunate accident of European politics that Valery Giscard d'Es-taing, Helmut Schmidt and Harold Wilson came to the leadership of their countries-Giscard after the death of President Georges Pompidou, Schmidt after an unexpected scandal in Chancellor Willy Brandt's administration, and Wilson after the labor crisis in

In a world full of amateur and professional political prophets, nobody ventured the prediction that by the autumn of this year, these men would be the key figures in Europe, and Ford, Rockefeller and Kissinger, the presiding figures in Washington. The question now is what they will do with their new authority, and how they will get on with one another. President Giscard d'Estaing and Chancellor Schmidt, both highly intelligent and knowledgeable in the fields of money and trade, both former finance ministers, have already 'established a sound relationship.

Prime Minister Wilson is also an expert in these fields, but like Premier Kakuei Tanaka in Japan, he has been preoccupied with a raging inflation and the prospect of a bruising election. Meanwhile, the United States government has also been overwhelmed by its domestic concerns, and like the others, with the Cyprus crisis.

Larger Issues

For the next few weeks, President Ford will still be setting his new team in place and the Europeans will be getting over the August holidays, but after that these hopeful new political leaders will begin talking about

There is still some criticism here of Secretary of State Kissinger's diplomatic tactics, and most recently of his handling of the Cyprus affair, but no longer complaints of any lack of con-

What the allies needed a year ago was a hearing aid, now they are finally listening to each other.

Europe's Nine

The testimony of responsible efficials in Paris is that the negotiations among the European Nine are much more candid and fruitful. All the problems remain. particularly inflation and political uncertainty from Portugal to Greece and Turkey, but the attitude of the main powers toward each other has improved. President Ford has made an excellent impression here by his candor, by his defense of a strong American military establishment, and by his willingness to appoint experienced men like Rockefeller. Officials here have the impression that there are differences Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger on the strategic defense of the West, and they are hoping that this controversy within both the American executive and the Congress can be removed through Ford's influence on Capitol Hill and with the Europe's nightmare has long been that political divisions within the United States would revive the American isolationist impulse.

And it has not escaped the notice of officials here that the latest Gallup pell shows that American concern over domestic problems outruns worry over international problems by the largest margin since the 1930s.

Accordingly, the settlement of the Nixon question, his replacement by a President popular in the country and the Congress. and the nomination of Rockefeller, who has strong support among the governors of the states and long experience in foreign affairs, have all created a more hopeful and cooperative attitude

In addition, inflation is running so high here it threatens the stability of all the free governments. Indeed, they have almost come to the conclusion that they cannot solve the inflation problem by themselves but have to it. They have "almost" reached that point but not quite. Thi: will be the real test of the new men and the new atmospherlater in the year.

When he promised a new day for America's 500,000 reservation Indians in July, 1970, Mr. Nixon told the Indians that they could expect more tribal freedom. It was suggested, for example, that tribal governments would take over many of the functions of local offices of the Bureau of In-dian Affairs—the division of the Interior Department that has acted as a wet murse to Indians for 150 years.

But after four years, only two tribes—the swamp-bound Miccosukees along the Tamiami Trail near Miami, with 430 members, and the Zunis on a semidesers piateau in western New Mexico, with 5.150 members—have more than limited control of their own

As an experiment, these two tribes have been permitted to run their own education, welfare and health programs, functions that the Eureau of Indian Affairs performs for the other Indians who live on the 280 federal Indian reservations controlled by the buresu.

For the last 20 years there have been numerous recommendations that Indians be given autonomy on their reservations, but the Bureau of Indian Affairs and Congress have been slow to act. Some white politicians have expressed the fear that Indians might steal the money appropriated to the tribes for health, welfare and education.

Robert Robertson, the former executive director of the National Council for Indian Opportunity. said he thought it was "unfair for the federal government to expect more from Indian tribal governments than it does from state and city governments." "There are good intentions here." Mr. Robertson said of the Navajo tribal chairman. "It still tribal governments in general.

Saigon Troops, Communists Contest Rich Rice Lands

70,000 'New Refugees' Flee War Zones in North

By David K. Shipler

DANANG. South Victnam, Aug. 21 (NYT) .- At 5 o'clock one recent morning, Mrs. Le Thi Ba finally gave up. She and her husband had held out for 20 days living in their own sandbagged bunker, subsisting on meager rations of rice, trying with every ounce of strength to stay in their tiny village of Son Phuc despite incessant shelling by North Vietnamese gunners

But the rice had run out. Before dawn Mrs. Ba gathered her 2-year-old son into her arms and began the long walk out, becoming the latest of an estimated 70,000 new refugees created by heavy fighting in the northern provinces of South Vietnam in

The number has doubled recently, officials here say. Many of the refugees are hugging Route 1, the major strip of security in government areas. They are jammed into schoolhouses and crowded into shacks made of ammunition crates and they are running out of food. Although some have received emergency supplies of rice from the government, many others say they have been given nothing.

Mrs. Ba, traveling by foot and by bus, found her way to a school at the edge of Danang, 25 miles northeast of her village. She stood in the schoolyard, her face grimy and weary. Her son played listlessly with an empty

Just down the road, like a haunting symbol of an era South Vietnam has tried to put behind, stood one of the country's biggest refugee camps empty. Its corrugated tin buildings, as vast as warehouses, rattled and crashed in the wind like the bulks of wrecked ships. The government had succeeded there and in most other parts of the country in emptying the squalld refugee camps and moving the people onto farmland or back to villages.

The new wave of refugees now represents a serious setback to that effort. Some say the effort itself was partly responsible for the outbreak of fighting.

To secure land for resettlethe South Vietnamese Army has tried to consolidate control over fertile rice lands, sometimes sweeping through ontested areas, sometimes through Vie' Cong-held villages.

One foreign diplomat who watches the situation said that he thought one reason for the recent Communist attacks was to regain land they believed was rightfully theirs at the time of the cease-fire in January, 1973. La. spring, he explained, the ground in Military Region I to a South Vietnamese offensive in the coastal areas of Quang Ngai Province, especially Duc Pho and Mo Duc districts and in other lowland rice-growing regions.

"They're strong in the western hills and not in the lowlands." he said of the Communist forces. That's why they've pressed so hard for implementation of the Paris accords—that gives them freedom of movement—they were supposed to have corridors of supply. But the government has set up a blockade openly and at-tempted to isolate pockets of Communist control, cut them off from sources of supply."

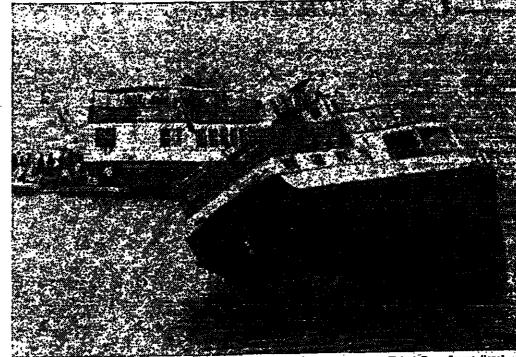

Another view of the Communist strategy was put forth by a refugee, Nguyen Tanh, the elected chief of the village council of Loc Son, about 25 miles southeast of Danang.

"The main thing in the Paris agreement is general elections." Mr. Tanh explained, "and the Communists cannot accept a general election with this side because they have no people and with no people they have no votes. That's why they have kept violating the cease-fire-not to get land, but to get people."

According to Edward Segal a former Philadelphia policeman who is a "technical adviser" to Criminal Research Products, Inc. of Conshobocken, Pa., the Russians will take possession of the fully equipped vehicle shortly. He said that the laboratory contains the most up-to-date evidence-collection and identification devices available to U.S. law enforcement agencies,

Technically, the transaction does not violate any governmental regulations because the vehicle and its contents left the country on July 12, a week before the new restrictions were announced. ## Soviets Seen Space Corps

By Thomas O'Toole WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (WP). Soviet Union is being built up at the same time that the American astronaut force is dwindling. That's the observation of U.S. tronsuts returning from the Soviet Union after training stints for next summer's Apollo-Soyus test flight, in which astronauts Thomas Stafford, Donald (Deke) Slayton and Vance Brand will dock their Apollo spacecraft for two days with a Soyuz spacecraft piloted by Alexel Leonov and Valery Kubasov.

"Star City [as Americans call Zvezdny Gorodok, where most Soviet cosmonants live and train] looks like a boom town." Brig. Gen. In contrast the U.S. astronaut corps has fallen in number to $4. Only nine are training for a flight: These are the three prime crew members for the Soyuz docking mission, their backup and support crews.

The United States reached 2 peak in the Apollo limar land-ing days of close to 60 astronauts, a figure which declined to 49 at the end of 1971 and to 41 by the end of 1972. Three astronauts lef the corps at the end of the Skylab program and four have quit in the last six months.

As a result of conversations with Soviet cosmonauts and engineers, Gen. Statford said he does not believe the Russians have any new spacecraft under development. He said they plan to use the two-man Soyuz spacecraft, flying it with men at least twice a year for the next five years either by itself or as a docking vehicle to the Salvut

SALZBURG: Contemporary Music Coming Out of Its Ghetto

By David Stevens

SALZBURG, Aug. 21 (IHT)~ Twentieth-century music, except in its more easily digestible forms, has always been something of a hot potato for the Salzburg Festival, sometimes juggled cau-tiously at arm's length, sometimes dropped as unsuitable for the festival's established diet.

This year, however, there are frong signs that the festival is coming to terms with the music of the last half-century or so. gradually sheorbing it as a conilnuity instead of as a thing apart. There has been the world premiere in the cathedral of a new work by Krzysztof Penderecki. A piece by Gyögy Ligeti appeared with Mozart and Brahms in a Vienna Philharmonle program conducted by Clau-dio Abbado, and Maurizio Pollini pairing Schoenberg and Beethoven in his piano recital.

Most of the "modern" works are still kept slightly apart in concerts sponsored by the Aus-trian Radio. These concerts may be a shelto to use one unflattering term that has been applied to them, but this year it is a very open ghetto, combining 20th-century "classics" with works by living composers who know where the non-shetto audience is and how to reach it. And the performances have been decidedly of festival standard.

A Commission Four years ago, a successful performance in the Salzburg cathedral of Penderecki's "St. Luke Passion" marked the beginning of the systematic inclusion of contemporary music in the festival programs. It also led to a commission for the Polish composer, from the Austrian Radio, for a new sacred work to help celebrate the 1,200th anniversary of the cathedral, which is being observed this year.

The Latin text of the new comnosition is the "Magnificat," the hymn of the Virgin Mary from: St. Luke, best known in its setting by Bach. For his 40-minute setting, Penderecki employed a Couble chorus totalling 48 voices. a boys' choir, a soloist ensemble of seven male voices, a bass soloist and a more-or-less standard orchestrs. The entire ensemble is quality. These include a triple lugue, a passacaglia, an a capella chorus, a bass solo with a lean orchestral accompaniment, and so forth.

هكذا من الأصل

At one point the contrapuntal ariting ranges up to 55 separate coices, an extravagance lost to the ear in the extreme resonance of the cathedral. For the most part, however, the composer seems to have taken this resonance called into play only in the closmin account. Although Penderecks musical fingerprints are audible—string clusters, fraging Gloria, each of the first six parts having its own instrument-

Penderecki was his own energetic and communicative conductor, and he and his performers—the Austrian Radio Orchestra and Chorus, the Schola Canto-rum of Stuttgart, the Vienna choir boys and the bass Peter Lagger-were warmly, if not stormily, applauded in the packed cathedral.

Less Segeralam was the vital and precise conductor of the rame orchestra, with vocal soloists, in two major quasi-theatrical works of the last 15 years. Luciano Berio's "Epifanie" is a prime example of his genlus for blending word and music, and the in-imitable Cathy Berberian was on hand to guarantee the authentic delivery of the multilingual vocal selections from Joyce, Proust, Brecht and others.

The late Bernd Alois Zunmermann's "Die Soldaten" requires such a complex stage apparatus that-like other operatic composers who have despaired of a theatrical production—he prepar-ed a "symphony" of key orchestra! and rocal excerpts that received a powerful performance in a concert in the Felsenreitschule, The six singers semi-acted their parts. and the text and theatrical impact came through with remarkable clarity despite the difficult vocal lines, the thunderous or-chestra and the lack of visual Gravel imparts lightness, per-fume and elegance, the Bordeaux vintners say. Loam gives a rich, powerful taste. Beneath the soil. a limestone base lends vigor. Or an iron-rich conglomerate base makes for softness.

Not so, says Amerine. "This thing about calcium and loam-I don't think it has anything to do with it. It's the temperature of the soil that counts. The rest of it is chamber of commerce asense." Detecting the astonishment of his listener, Amerine added: "Maybe we should put it this way: Soil content is not as important as popular opinion says it is." "Definitive proof of the inportance of soil content per se as separate from temperature and climate is very hard to come by. Certain soils are better because they are warmer. A warmer soil makes the grapes ripen faster. A soft shat is well drained and And he added that soil temperature is even more important in Europe than in California because of wider weather variations. Elimination

His advice would be valuable, because his sense of taste and smell must be among the most sensitive anywhere. Extracts from the statement by Mr. Hilton S. Clarke, Chairman and Mr. Clive R. Sanders, Managing Director for the financial year ended June 30th, 1974.

- This financial year has been one of solid growth. We have continued to develop our commercial lending business, maintaining the liquidity and trading limits which have existed since the Bank's
- Profit before tax, but after debenture interest, was £373,000, an increase of 12%. Our loan portfolio stands at £39 million, an increase of £12 million. Total assets have increased from £38.6 million to £72.3 million.
- The decision to restructure our group of Shareholders' banks last September confirmed the original logic of forming Atlantic International Bank and has provided a firm base for expansion. The total resources of our shareholders are in excess of $13 billion.
- In order to support the expansion of business, our shareholders increased the Bank's paid-up share and subordinated loan capital by £2 million during the year. Our shareholders have furthermore committed £1 million of share capital to be called at a future date.

BP Payment to Kuwait Tied to Pound's Shift

LONDON, Aug. 21 (Reuters).... Sterling rallied moderately against the dollar today after a 2 per cent drop over the past week. But foreign exchange dealers said the improvement Was partly technical Sterling closed at $2,325 against yesterday's $2.32—the nearest for some months to the trigger point for government guarantees of official overseas sterling balances. Dealers said the improvement vas due entirely to profit-taking against the dollar and noted that Continental currencies led by the deutsche mark moved up faster than sterling today.

The sterling guarantees come into effect when the weighted average depreciation of sterling hits 18.35 per cent of the December 1971 level. At today's rate. sterling was showing an 18 per cent depreciation, compared to 18.1 per cent yesterday and 17.8 per cent on Monday.

The 18.85 per cent trigger point has been breached only once—on May 14 when it shot up to Sterling's buoyant mid-year performance in exchange markets, allowing five months of the guarantee period to expire with virtually no approach toward the trigger point, has been broadly reversed over the past few days. The week so far has seen the disclosure of unprecedented wage inflation in Britain over the past year, a 16-year low by shares on the stock exchange and record yields of over 16 per cent on longer-term government fixed-

On the London Stock Exchange today, the Financial Times index of 30 leading industrial shares was down two points from an overnight of 211.9 to 209.9. The index recorded its biggest one-day rise this year with a jump of 12.1 points yesterday and today was up by more than six points before falling back.

Oil Payments Cited KUWATT, Aug. 21 (UPI).-Gulf Oil and British Petroleum have paid the Knwaiti government $1.35 billion for the government's share of crude oil for the first half of this year, Oil Ministry sources said today. The newspaper Af Siyassah said this transfer sparked off recent reports in the foreign press withdrawing their funds from Britain and investing them in the U.S. market.

The sources said the payment was made to Kuwait last week for the government's share of crude under the participation agreement The FDIC, under its duties, for the period beginning Jan. I would have liability for millions in customer deposits if Franklin and ending June 30.

Mass Resignation At Small British Insurance Firm

LONDON, Aug. 21 (AP-DJ).--A U.K. insurance company's chairman and board of directors resigned today amid reports of losses suffered in the forced closure of the Israel-British Bank (London) Ltd.

Harry Landy, chairman, and two other directors resigned from the board of Sentinel Insurance Co., a relatively small firm. The newly-designated chairman, Cyril Murray, said Sentinel is not in any financial difficulty. "It's solvent and carrying on in business," he said.

Mr. Landy, who was also chairman of Israel-British Bank, could not be reached for comment. If is understood that both he and Sentinel owned shares in Israel-British Bank. The Tel Aviv-based bank's assets were seized in July after it could not meet depositors' claims for about $9 million.

Mixed Views on Ford Ascendancy: An Analysis

By Leonard Silk

NEW YORK, Aug. 21 (NYT).—Since Gerald Ford succeeded Richard Nixon as President on Aug. 9, a remarkable phenomenon has developed.

Washington, the nation's political capital.

staged a joyous celebration, halling Mr. Furd's simplicity, honesty and determination to unify his own party, to be kind to Democrats and to treat inflation as domestic public enemy No. 1.

But paradoxically New York City, the nation's financial capital, sank into despon-dency. In the first eight trading sessions after Mr. Ford took over the White House, the Dow Jones industrial average fell 75.72 points to its lowest closing level in four What accounts for the difference between the ways Washington and New York are reacting to the opening of the Ford administration? Different Viewpoints

One explanation is that beauty or ugliness, hope or despair, is in the eye of the beholder and that Washington and New York are two very different beholders. Washington is a one-industry town. Its business is government, and nothing makes its spirits rise like a new president.

But the business of New York (as President Calvin Coolidge once said of America) is business. If Washington has primarily been concerned about Watergate, New York, like the rest of the nation, has been worried even more about infla-

Inflation—and the high interest rates that inflation and tight Federal Reserve policy bring—are particularly agonizing worries for the stock market.

Washington economic worries are more remote. It can afford to be calm about the economy, because Washington plays with other people's money.

Own Money at Stake

New York is more manic-depressive, because it plays with its own money. Washington thinks abstractly about output, income and employment. Its own work goes on through depression and through prosperity.

Washington economists never lose their jobs. This gives them a remarkable degree of composure as they recommend policies for tightening up the money supply and cutting the budget, although they realize this will bring some increase in the unemployment rate. Some deplore the trend and others are prepared to suffer it bravely, but they cannot help crying croco-dile tears, since they are not personally affected.

But in New York the stockbrokers, securities salesmen, clerks and sten-ographers who labor in Wall Street lose their very own jobs when hard times come. From 1969 to April of this year, employ-according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, declined from 105,200 to 75,700-a 23 per cent drop.

Attrition Continues

Since April there has undoubtedly been still worse attrition. It is difficult for Wall Street to keep a calm, high-minded and philosophical attitude under the circumstances especially when the circumstances include losses of billions of dollars for partners, customers and relatives. This mervelously concentrates the mind on the need for better economic policies and more

As the old saw has it, when somebody else loses his job it is a recession, but when you lose your job it is a depression. So Wall Street is in a depression, and Washington does not even know whether there is a recession, as it sorts through the masses of data, with the real gross national product declining but employment still crawling upward.

Washington can be immediately bucked up by a new personality or an old friend -a Jerry Ford.

New York waits and wonders. It sees the economic fundamentals unchanged, the inflation continuing, profits slipping, recession developing, albeit with a new political rhetoric and style emerging. New York asks: Does the new mood matter? Washington insists it does.

All other prices taken together, both goods and services, continued the rapid increases of other recent months. What is more, the movement of agricultural wholesale prices in July indicated that food prices at retail may be climbing again this month "Real spendable earnings" of the average worker—weekly wages adjusted for higher prices and any tax changes—rose by 0.2 per cent last month as the growth in earnings exceeded the rise in prices. But compared with a year ago, real earnings were down 5.3 per cent, a point that continues to be stressed by organized labor. One helpful element in the consumer price index for July was that the steep rise in gasoline prices that began last November almost ceased. The rise for the month was only 0.5 per cent. Service Costs Spurt

Despite this slowdown in the fuel sector, the prices of all goods other than food rose by 1.3 per cent, seasonally adjusted, in line with the average monthly increases since the beginning of the year. Service prices rose 1.1 per cent, the largest for any month this year. The over-all consumer price index for July was 1483, with 1967 prices taken as 100. This was 11.8 per cent above a year earlier. The July rise was 0.8 per cent both before and after seasonal adjustment.

Durable Goods Orders Up In other economic news today. rce Department ed that new orders for durable goods rose 2.2 per cent in July, compared with an upward revised increase of 0.3 per cent in Bookings for durable goods increased $1.04 billion in July to $47.89 billion following an increase of $118 million in June. The June figure originally reported as a 0.3 per cent decline from May was revised upward to reflect additional data.

The department said durable goods shipments last month increased $2.24 billion, or 5.2 per cent, to $45.03 billion, sharply above the 0.8 per cent advance in Unfilled orders in July increased $2.86 billion, or 2.3 per cent, to $138.95 billion.

Increase in Interest Rates Feared

Wall Street Prices Set New 4-Year Low

NEW YORK, Aug. 21 (IHT),-Investors, obviously not very impressed with monthly cost-ofliving figures or with a partial price rollback by General Motors, drove prices on the New York Stock Exchange lower today for the ninth time in the last ten

Another item that appeared to upset investors was a prediction from economists at Salomon Brothers that upward pressure on interest rates would continue most of the year. They also warned that the United States is likely to experience a pronounced economic setback starting early next year, or possibly late this Concern about the outlook on interest rates was heightened by the sharp increase in Treasury bill rates, shattering the previous record set in May of just over 9 per cent. The latest 13-week bill was quoted today at 9.32 bid, up from 9.2 yesterday and 8.346 at Monday's auction. The companion 26-week bill jumped to 9.45 per cent bid from 9.31 yesterday and 8.899 on Monday.

Krupp Seeks Specialty Steel Makers

the whole amount, dealers said. In Chicago, a rally sparked by good commercial support lifted wheat futures 16 cents a bushel and strongly influenced trimming of early declines in most other nmodity futures.

The selling was prompted by-a weather service prediction of more rain for the corn and soybean belt today and tomorrow. Wheat futures were buoyed by some commercial support, with

It's fun to read the ads in the Herald Tribune for people, places, goods and services all over Europe, all over the world.

And if you want to place an ad - a single « Personal » item or a whole campaign no better medium than the Trib. Rates are reasonable.

Food. The fine art of good eating is a favorite European pastime - and governets eat up the Tribune's food articles. Where to eat what, and for how much, is covered regularly in the feature pages of the Inter-national Herald Tribune.

"inside story"

THE TIT affair may have flash-in the revelation, for a wrecked the Justice Depart ample, that Sen. John Kenne ment, demoralized the Republicans and doomed Attorney General Richard Kleindienst, but it did wonders for Brit Hume. Hume was the investigator who wrote the Jack Anderson newspaper columns in 1972 charging that the Nixon administration had settled its anti-trust snit against the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation for a $400,000 subsidy to the GOP national convention in San Diego. What made the accusations stick was the famous memorandum attributed to Dita Beard, the conglomerate's Washington lobbyist, laying out the terms of a quid pro quo in embarrassing detail and containing the prophetic closing line—Please destroy this, huh?"

This was before Watergate, remember, and everyone was quite shocked by it all. There were cries of outrage, stern denials and public hearings in the U.S. Senate. And at the center of every-thing was Brit Hume, or so it seems to him. "The ITT affair," he writes today, "was the best thing that ever happened to my career. I was virtually unknown before it began, despite several years with Jack and the publication of my book ["Death in the Mines"]. Now I was well known throughout the news business and even known to some outside it. Magazines were interested in my freelance work and my agent reported expressions of interest from book editors... Kleindienst may have survived the ITT affair in one piece, but I had come through it much better. I had no reason to complain from a personal standpoint."

Expressions of interest from book editors often lead to books, of course and now Hume has written "Inside Story," an account of his years with the country's most widely syndicated columnist that covers their exposés of such big events as Watergate, the India-Pakistan War and the jettisoning of Sen. Thomas Eagleton and of such nonevents as the intimate ac-tivities of Al Capp and Spiro T. Agnew's divorced (now remarried) son, Randy.

It is a remarkably revealing book, sometimes inadvertently so, in ways that are hardly flattering to the profession. Fame is the painted lady journalists pretend not to list after and not many people in the newspaper business will be happy that Hume can be so openly delighted with the wondrous ways he has profited from the country's misfortunes.

The book's title is in many ways misleading. You'd think that, with all the leaks pouring into the Jack Anderson trough, the author might at least tell us something here about sources, No. such luck. There's an occasional rest in his uncarny, and som times appalling ability to ou bluff various naive politicians at officials, to "con them a little as he puts it benignly, by pr tending that he knows more the he does, thereby persuading the to confirm the truth. Often to Anderson simply lies to I sources by telling them that I may not use the material dama; ing to them—a ploy, usually e fective, to prevent them fro giving the information to conpeting reporters.

But the principal Anderso maxim is that writing a new paper column is "a combinatic of reporting and showmanship a provocative notion that Hun seems to accept to the exter that at one point he term Kleindienst and Anderson as "if two principal antagonists in ti whole [TIT] affair," This is an amazing commen that raises several disturbin questions for both journalists an their readers. For one thing, may have been Anderson's hubr along these lines that prompts his refusal to retract the allega-tion of drunk driving again-Sen. Eagleton in 1972, even whe Anderson knew it had no basis i fact. Hame says that Anderso, behaved disgracefully in the episode, and the incident ma have led to his decision to qui a few months later. But Hun left with the conviction the Anderson was "the best bravest reporter I had

The matter of bravery is @ final curious notion of the fascinating and valuable bod Both Anderson Both Anderson and Hume do tinue to see themselves as pu little Davids pitted against in Goliaths in and out of the mil tary-industrial-political comple: To a large degree, it's a true a sumption, but Hume's book in th end provides fresh evidence the journalists can sometimes be a self-deluding about the external politicians they write about.

Siam hands often turn the scale in Swiss team matches, and skillful cardplay may make the difference between victory and defeat. On the diagramed from a recent Swiss team championship, South brought home an optimistic grand slam to gain points for his team. North bid gently for two rounds, and discovered something about his partner's distribution. The three-heart bid clearly indicated a six-card suft, so North launched into Blackwood. He located two aces and a king, presumably the heart king, and on that basis could count 12 tricks. If South held the dismond queen there would be a 13th, and if not, he was confident that his partner would find a way. And he did.

turtleneck sweater is just the opposite." I was right, because as we were talking the turtleneck started to disintegrate before my eyes. "That sweater cost me $12."

"I can't keep all these washing instructions straight," she said angrily.

"What are you going to do how?"

"I'm going to wash your 89.3 per cent rogifier wash n'dry shirt." "You have to use fresh essence of lime mixed with distilled underground spring water," I reminded her.

"Are you sure? It seems to me that there was a warning attached to the shirt that if you used distilled underground spring water the colors would run."

That applies only to shirts with French cuffs," I told her. "Of course," she said. "What an idiot I am for not keeping it straight."

I started to put on a clean pair of socks. My large toe went right through the sock.

"What the blazes did you do with my socks?"

"Nothing. I put them in the washing machine, added virgin calf detergent, two tablespoons of chlorine and a cup of epsom salts, according to the instructions sewn in the sock." ·

I read the instructions, "Did you set the washing machine at 7 1/2 revolutions per minute?"

"I tried to, but had to hold manually and my arm got tired," she confessed. "I guess at the end the machine was going nine revolutions per minute. But I figured it didn't matter."

I threw down the socks in disgust. "If it didn't matter, why would they sew the instructions

She started to sob. I felt bad and said, "It's all right, I'll buy another pair of socks that can be washed at nine revolutions per minute. Well, I think I'll put on my 100 per cent stay-pressedforever seersucker suit."

I put on the pants. As I was inserting the belt, the legs, just below my hips, collapsed and fell to my ankles.

"What did you do to my suit?" "I had it dry-cleaned."

"You're not supposed to dryclean a stay-pressed-forever material," I screamed. "Look, it says right here in the coat that the only way to clean it is to place it over an air-conditioning unit for 24 hours,"

'I put your Nehru suit over the air-conditioning unit." "The Nehru suit has to be dipped in naphtha and airline hydraulic fuel." "It didn't say so in the coat."

"The instructions were printed on the beads that came with the

"Don't yell at me," my wile yelled. "If you bought suits made of wool and shirts made of cotton, you'd have something to wear tonight."

"Yesh, but then look at the laundry and cleaning bill we'd have.

Worst Thing About Being Abroad-Those Languages

DARIS (IHT).—The British are great travelers: "For my part, I travel not to go anywhere, but to go. I travel for travel's sake," wrote Robert Louis Stevenson. Sometimes, to posterity's regret, they did not write about what they saw—Samuel Johnson, according to Boswell, left no record of his trip to France because "intelligent readers had seen more of France than I had"-but often, very often,

In addition to the great travelers, there existed their opposites: "Never go abroad. It's a dreadful place," said the fifth Earl of Cadogan. "I hate abroad," said Nancy Mittord's Uncle Matthew. Such people, too, left a record of their journeys, and it has been the happy idea of Alan Wykes to compile an anthology of British travel writings from the 18th century to 1914, including not only the observations of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, Boswell, Charles Burney and Charles Dickens, but also of someone named Archie Grant, whose 1912 letter from Norway fell into Mr. Wykes's hands at

"I would not enter Norway again for all the firs in Scandinavia." wrote Archie Grant. "The blight of Temperance has settled on the place. Half the towns have prohibition laws . . . Cold, clean living and scenery have killed the place-if it ever lived . Spare me holiness when I travel abroad. Lust, drink and corruption are so much more

Whether the natives like it or not, British life bears the indelible influence of foreign lands, from Palladian architecture to frozen scampi. Mr. Wykes, in the preface to his book, which is called "Abroad" and is published in London by Macdonald, traces the history of British tourism, pointing out in his first lines that the word travel was originally traveil, meaning labor or toil.

The old word tour, he adds, means to go in a circle or turn while tourist is much more modern: "The Grand Tourist." wrote Adam Smith in the 1770s. "commonly returns home more conceited, more unprincipled, more dissipated, and more incapable of any serious application, either to study or to business, than he could well have become in so short a time had he lived at home."

By the mid-19th century, the aristocratic Grand Tour had been democratized by Thomas Cook—too democratized, according to a letter to the Times: "Today any flibbertygibbet maidservant may put her foot outside the bounds of her Homeland and return filled with opinions of grossest error on the conditions of society Mr. Wykes makes the sound point that the British characteristic of insularity was paradoxically strengthened by making travel easier. Chauvinism, if not xenophobia, was to a considerable extent nourished by tourism:

"The most important word in the Polish language, as in all languages, is Angelski. The language surpasses all other Slav tongues in richness, flexibility and conciseness. But Angelski (I am English) means everything." Baedeker's "Poland," 1911.

"Management of Savages: A frank, joking but determined manner, joined with an air of showing more confidence in the good faith of the natives than you really feel, is the best." Francis Galton, "The Art of Travel," 1872.

"Ch'u pa. pu yao shan-pin-chin, na-lai yi p'ing-tzu p'i-chiu. Go away. I do not wish champagne, bring me a bottle of beer, it is the English way." Prof. H.A. Giles, "Chinese Without a Teacher,"

Some of the examples are very different: Edward Lear, stumbling amiably through Albania, Samuel Sharp giving an interesting analysis of Italian-style theater, Charles Dickens simply listing some of the many advertisements for runaway slaves he had seen in America ("Ran away, a Negro boy about 12 years old. Had round his neck a chain dog-collar with De Lampert engraved on it." "Ran away, a Negro woman with two children. A few days before she went off. I burned her with a hot iron, on the left side of her face. I tried to make the letter MT), Robert Palcon Scott describing Christmas on his doomed polar expedition, an occasion as movingly English as he could make though it began with seal soup.

There are also moments of wonder-Sir John Russell mexpectedly seeing Beethoven in a café: "To think that I, an ordinary Englishman in the ordinary course of travel abroad, should have encountered the great Beethoven!" And there are attempts to adapt to foreign customs, however queer: "When actually on a carriage or railway journey it is unwise to make large meals. The best way is to make no meal at all until the journey is over, but to carry a supply of cold provisions, bread, eggs, chicken, game, sandwiches, Cornish pasties, almonds, oranges, captain's hiscuits, water and sound red wine or cold tea. . . "Thomas Chambers, "A Manual of Diet in Health and Disease," 1875.

Sometimes one had to be as crude as the hatives, warned 'Cooks Tourist Guide to the Nile" in 1899: "The most intimate details of the anatomy are required in dealing with foreign physicians. Please, a tisane to relieve the pain caused by falling on my coccyx would be de trop in Tunbridge Wells, but de rigueur in the

The worst thing about Abroad was that people tended to speak foreign languages there: "I'm an Englishman and require instant attention to the damage done to my solar topee is far better than any equivocation that may be meant well but will gain little respect." stated the "Guide to the Native Languages of Africa" in 1890, but "A Gentleman of Quality" suggested, in French for the English (1894), that some effort should be made:

"Why is there no marmalade available is better understood in the form 'Quelle marmelade non?' Bring marmalade may be simply rendered as 'marmelade demandez,' always remembering that the z is silent as in demanday."

But the general reaction was to remain inalterably English: "The language everywhere causes confusion. There is the town E Obeyed and the Sheikh El Obeyed; there is the Haloman of Cairo and the Haloman of Khartoum. I became irritable and said I would write to the Times about it." General Gordon, "Despatches." 1884. English orneriness about other languages had its unexpected benefits, though as a letter from Joseph Conrad to Hugh Walpole

"The only thing that grieves me and makes me dance with rage is the cropping up of the legend set afloat by Hugh Gifford about my hesitation between French and English as a writing language. For it is absurd. When the Englishman travels abroad the gre gift and contribution he takes with him is his language. You may take it from me that if I had not known English from the merciful spread of the language by the English traveler I wouldn't have written a line for print in my life."

" How 1.000 Per Cent Turned Into Nothing

Eleanor McGovern, wife of Santa defeated 1972 presidential candidata George McGovern, says he reversed his "1,000 per cent" support of his runningmate, Sen. Thomas Eagleton, only after "long, confidential hours on the telephone with doctors and paychistrists." She says that the doctors were "cautious but deeply troubled" about Eagleton's having been bospitalized several times for depression. They were concerned, she says, "about the pos-sibility that history might one day thrust a person with recurrent manic-depressive tendencies ... into the presidency. Some said the illness had a built-in periodicity." Mrs. McGovern describes the Eagleton affair and her husband's campaign in "Uphil: A Personal Story," Written with the aid of her former Sen. Eagleton press secretary, Mary Finch Hoyt, Excerpts from the book, to be published by Houghton Mifflin, appear in the September issue of is a thing that fits in. The the Good Housekeeping magazine.

Fidel Castro has agreed to take part in a TV sepcial on Ernest Hemingway to be filmed on location in Cuba, according to a TV production company. "It was really very simple," said producer Dick Foster of Bob Banner Associates. "I placed a long-distance telephone call to Castro and after a brief explana-tion to one or two of his sides,

I found myself speaking directly to the Prime Minister. Hemingway is held in great regard by the Cubans." The house where the author lived is now a public museum and "several bers he frequented have Hemingway plaques on the walls," Poster said.
